

CALL FOR CHRISTMAS DONATIONS

SALVATION ARMY CORPS WILL GIVE ANNUAL SPREAD

COMMANDER ISSUES APPEAL TO PUBLIC

Plan is to Provide Dinner for Guthrie's Poor and Needy

The local corps of the Salvation Army is beginning preparations for the annual Christmas dinner given to the poor and needy of Guthrie and Fusion E. A. Hughes, commanding the local corps has issued the following appeal to the public:

Dear Friends:

It has always been heretofore, that the Salvation Army has by the assistance of our friends in Guthrie given the poor of this city a free Christmas dinner, and would like to repeat the same this coming Christmas. We, the Salvation Army, are willing to do the work, if our friends will furnish us the necessary funds, and food. If you are not able to give a large sum, give what you feel able, either food or money, it will be greatly appreciated.

We will call at your home, and try to see as many of our friends as possible, but in case we do not see you at your home, we will be glad if you will either call us up by phone or send us a card to call and see you, and we will be glad to receive either money or food donations.

Some may ask, are there any poor in the city? I have not been here long and have not been around among the poor much, but at the same time, I am going as many as I can find, and that there are a number of families that will not be able to get a Christmas cheer, unless the Army or some other friends will take the matter to heart and give it to them. And owing to the financial depression, the outcome is quite certain, that there will be a number of good, worthy working men that will be unemployed, who did expect to have a little something extra on that occasion, but to their sad disappointment, they find that they will have to do without, and I wish to say that this need not be. Christmas is a day on which all the world should be glad, and if every one will do their part in trying to make some one else happy and fill some heart with cheer, the result will be that the giver will be glad, "As it is more blessed to give than to receive."

It would indeed be pleasant if every one could supply themselves with such a dinner, without depending upon some one else but I am certain that this cannot be. Our Savior one time said to His followers: "The poor ye have with you always," and as long as they are with us we should help them, any way on an occasion like this, as we are able to be in the same misfortune as they, as we are not wholly self dependent, only in a measure. So please do not forget the poor and neglect to assist us in this undertaking.

I have been in this work over 12 years and out of this time have had the pleasure of spending nine pleasant Christmas days in seeing the poor people, men, women and children comfortably seated at a big row of tables, spread with all the good things that go to make one feel thankful and happy on that special occasion. My friends I do not wish that one person shall go without this blessing of cheer, and I shall hunt this town over to find those that will not be able to supply themselves with this blessing.

I also ask our friends to help us in finding the worthy needy ones as we may miss them on our rounds. Wishing our friends every blessing and a joyful and merry Christmas, I remain yours for the poor in Him.

SUFFERED AGONY WITH SALT RHEUM

On Hands, Arms, and Face for Three Years—Spent Hundreds of Dollars in Seeking a Cure—Hands Became a Solid Sheet of Sores—No Rest from Awful Itching Until

CUTICURA REMEDIES EFFECTED A CURE

"I had salt rheum for three years on my hands, arms, and face and I thought it would all over me. I tried four or five doctors but they failed and my hands had spent hundreds of dollars in trying everything we could hear of. But I grew worse and worse, my hands itched awfully and I could get no rest at all. I was just in agony all the time because when they did not itch they were so dry and cracked that I was miserable and when they cracked, they bled. The nails of my finger and thumb began to come off, and my hands were a solid sheet of sores. Several of my friends told me to try the Cuticura Remedies so I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and from the first my hands began to improve and now they are well, and I think that the Cuticura Remedies are worth their weight in gold, and I advise every one that has skin trouble to use them. Mrs. Orme Parham, 1639 11th Ave., Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 28, Feb. 11, and Mar. 31, 1907."

THE NERVOUS MAN.

His Complaint and How the Noise Nuisance Was Remedied.

He was a nervous man, and he had just moved into a new boarding house. "Isn't there any way to stop those people across the street from having their coal delivered at 2 o'clock every morning? They seem to get about a dozen tons a day and it is poured into the cellar at that unearthly hour." "I don't see how I can very well control the neighbors," replied his land lady, "but I will see if anything can be done."

About ten days later the new boarder had occasion to thank her for her efforts. "I'm glad you succeeded in having that noise stopped," he said. "It is a great relief to me. Have they got their coal all in or do they have it delivered at some other time?"

"Neither," said the landlady. "They deliver it every morning at 2 o'clock, just the same as usual."

"You don't mean why—well, how do they get it down without making any sound?"

"They don't," it sounds just the same, but you have grown accustomed to it." "I find it hard to believe that."

"Set your alarm clock at 2 for a few mornings and satisfy yourself. I've rented that room before." New York Sun.

SIX, SEVEN AND EIGHT.

His Horses, His Carriages and His Reserve Fund.

Townsend Percy, speculator and promoter, who made and lost more than one fortune in the course of his life, used to be fond of repeating some of his mother's witticisms at his expense, generally brought about by his excessive aggressiveness during his periods of prosperity. Once Percy had driven four hundred for a year, when an unfortunate deal made it necessary for him to reduce his expenditures and sell his horses, on which occasion he said to him:

"Townsend, don't you think it would be better to drive one horse four years instead of four horses one year?"

Another time, when on the verge of financial crash, Percy still owned a considerable stable and gave no outward sign of pecuniary embarrassment. His mother met an old friend of the family about this period, who congratulated her on her son's success in life. "I am glad that Townsend is doing so well," said the friend.

"Yes, indeed," remarked the old lady. "Townsend has six horses and seven carriages and $8." Harper's Weekly.

SCOTT FERRIS ASKS FOR TWO CONGRESSMEN

Special to Daily Leader.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Congressman Scott Ferris, of the Fifth Oklahoma district, today introduced a bill in the house of representatives increasing the number of congressmen from Oklahoma from five to seven. He claims as a basis for this increase the federal census taken shortly before the constitutional election.

Under the terms of the bill the two additional congressmen would be elected at large until the next congressional apportionment is made. It proposes to call a special election and seat the two congressmen as soon as possible.

When the apportionment for Oklahoma congressmen was made, the committee used the federal census of 1900 as a basis. Since that time the population of the state has increased until the federal census takes almost a million gives Oklahoma a population equal to the requirements for seven members of the lower house.

Capping Voices.

On going into the rooms of one of his friends who was absent Dr. Mansel saw on the table the following lines of a poem in the following lofty style:

The sun's perpendicular heat
Illumined the depths of the sea.
Taking up a pen, he completed the stanza in the following witty way:

The fishes, beginning to sweat,
Cried, "Hang it, how hot we shall be!"
Dr. Watson, regius professor of divinity, had at one time been tutor of Trinity, and when he was made bishop of Mandar, an honest politician in Cambridge, who had at one time called Bishop Blake, out of respect to Dr. Watson changed his sign and replaced the head of Bishop Blake by that of Bishop Watson. This transfer drew from Mansel, who probably had some grudge against the late tutor, the following epigram:

Two of a trade can never agree—
No proverb was juster.
They've been down Blake, you see,
And put up Bishop Watson.

Mr. Weston made the same trip forty years ago, but this time a mile of illness which overtook him during the last week of his trip, broke his former record. He says that walking is the most healthful of exercises and will cure all ills.

Accordingly, it is not claimed that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is the only remedy of known value, but one of many reasons why it is the best of personal and family laxatives is the fact that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts without any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.

It acts pleasantly and naturally and truly as a laxative, and its component parts are known to and approved by physicians, as it is free from all objectionable substances. A Mistake.
Not one of us, even the most good natured, likes to have his mistakes pointed out. We may appear not to mind corrections and accept them with a smile, but it is human nature to smart under correction, although some of us may be clever enough to conceal the smart; hence the fewer mistakes we call attention to in others the better. Two-thirds of the mistakes we make are trivial. Their correction is unimportant. Why, then, notice them? Yet some people do, and do so constantly. A person speaks of having done a certain thing on Thursday, when in reality it was done on Wednesday. If no important point is involved, why call attention to the mistake? What good does it do to have the exact day set right? It is a matter of no importance, so why insist upon correcting the trivial error? Staunch friendships have often been pricked by this needless of useless correction. It is a great art, this art of learning to allow others to be mistaken when the mistake is unimportant. Few learn it, but those who do are among the most comfortable friends one can have.

Arbiters of Hairdressing.
"I want to learn the latest thing in hairdressing," said the visitor as soon as she landed in New York. "Take me to a hairdresser's establishment, so I can look things over."

"No, indeed," said her New York friend. "We will go there after you know what you wish to buy, but the place to learn how to dress your hair is in the dry goods shops. All you have to do is to study the salesgirls' hair. It is always done in the latest mode, and they all do it alike, so you cannot mistake. Sometimes it is badly exaggerated, but, of course, you don't have to copy that."

"I didn't know the salesgirls were your arbiters of fashion in New York." "Not in all respects, but you see, hairdressing doesn't cost anything. To have the latest styles in clothes or jewelry is expensive, but one can be a very bowing swell in the matter of hair without its costing a cent. Besides, they are usually restricted in the matter of gowns to plain black or possibly white blouses, so they take it all out in doing their hair."—New York Press.

DOING EUROPE.

This Tourist Seemed to Have a Mania For Souvenirs.

I had met Jones before. In fact, meeting him had become a sort of habit. The first time I saw him he was hanging by his feet, an apoplectic squirming mass, on the facade of Blarney castle, kissing the stone of eloquence. My camera caught him in the act. "Glad!" he spluttered when I told him that his feat was immortalized. "Is my face in it? Send me one, will you? That'll prove to the folks back in Zanesville that I did it."

I had run across him again in London, where all ways meet. I was sauntering around the Whitechapel ghetto, and through the window of an alley tavern, I noticed two men drinking stout. One was a "bobby" in uniform. His eyes were bleared and his face purple. The profile of the other looked familiar. I walked in and behold—Jones. The policeman, startled by my intrusion, brought himself together and walked out. Jones turned to me with a look of vast reproach.

"Glad to see you again, old man, but why in the deuce couldn't you stay away a little longer? I'd have had it in half an hour more."

"Had what?"

"Why, his club. Lord, what a souvenir that would have made!"

Our ways parted again for awhile. I was riding a wheel over the crest of the Black forest near Titisee, pumping slowly to the top of the long, white bar. A pine cone struck my handle bar, another knocked my hat off, and I looked up. An aerial voice emitted a Tyrolean halloo with muchunction, and I saw a swaying specter silhouetted against a cloud. My instinct told me it was Jones.

"Hey, old man!" he yelled, trumpet-tongued through his hand, "take my picture—quick. You're just in time. Can't hold on much longer. Camera's at foot of tree. Lost it! Halfway up."

His camera was smashed, so I used my own. "Were you expecting me?" I asked when he shinned down with barked hands and frayed trousers.

"No, not exactly. Look here—biggest pine cone in Germany, from the tallest tree on top of the highest hill in the Schwarzwald. There's something worth while!"

I admitted it, and we stood surveying the panorama of mountained hills and deep cut gorges full of the sound of falling water.

"What? Oh, yes, I suppose it is. But say—I wonder if I couldn't find a bigger cone somewhere in these parts. Let's move on."—Wilfred H. Albarn in Outing Magazine.

Leeper Says Lumber Pool Exists.
Cy Leeper, of Oklahoma City, a former resident of Sulphur, and a member of the constitutional convention, was in the city last evening for the purpose of appearing before the corporation commission and registering a kick against the Santa Fe in refusing to establish a siding on its main line to the lumber yard owned by himself and brother in Oklahoma City. Mr. Leeper says that a lumber pool exists in the state which prevents a siding from the railroad. He said he had offered the railroad all kinds of inducements to consider a proposition. The commission has already formulated an order against this discrimination of railroads among customers which will be officially published next week. It becomes effective in four weeks if the roads do not ask for a hearing on the matter.

A CRITIC ON MR. CHANDLER'S LECTURE.

In his discussion of the trial of Jesus Mr. Chandler showed a minute and comprehensive grasp of Hebrew law and explained in a minute the mode of procedure of the Hebrew courts in the days of Jesus. It was proven that almost every step taken by the supreme court of the Jews in that most momentous trial of the ages was in violation of law. While the trial, as called, before Pilate and Herod were outrageous almost unparalleled in the annals of time. The character of Pilate was analyzed, and his conduct on the occasion of the great trial was pictured so vividly that the Roman ruler stood before the audience as though on canvas. The treatment of the theme was scholarly, thorough, reverent, and produced a profound impression on the hearers.
